TAKE NOTICE. 1871.

You Afflicted or Sick?

USE

FAHRNEY'S

BLOOD CLEANSER

OR

PANACEA!

Trade Mark.

Curative and Cathartic, of Tonic and Alterative, for diseases arising from Impurities such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Sick Headache, Worms, Chills and Fevers, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Tetter, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Etc.

PRICE, $1.25 PER BOTTLE.

[illegible]

M. J. MARTIN,

[illegible]

Liquors and Liquors.

[illegible]

GROCERIES,

[illegible]

FINE LIQUORS.

[illegible]

Boots & Shoes

[illegible]

PAPER THAN EVER.

[illegible]

COBEAN'S

[illegible]

FARM IMPLEMENTS.

[illegible]

GUN SPRING PILLS.

[illegible]

N. MILLER'S

Marble Works.

[illegible]

REMOVED!

[illegible]

STEAM SAW MILL.

[illegible]

NEW BUSINESS.

Upholstering and Trimming.

[illegible]

STAGE OFFICE.

[illegible]

Jesse D. Keller,

COUNTY SURVEYOR.

[illegible]

J. M. WALTER'S

Grocery & Notion Store,

YORK STREET, GETTYSBURG.

[illegible]

Sugars, Coffees,

TEAS, SYRUPS,

[illegible]

NOTIONS, CONFECTIONS, FRUITS.

[illegible]

FLOUR AND MEAL,

[illegible]

J. W. WOODWARD,

Oyster Packer,

No. 38 CENTRAL AVENUE,

BALTIMORE, MD.

[illegible]

WILLIAM REED,

Sale Crier and Auctioneer,

[illegible]

GLOBE INN,

YORK STREET, NEAR THE DIAMOND,

GETTYSBURG, PENN'A.

[illegible]

MERCHANTS' HOTEL,

N. Fourth Street, between Market and Arch,

PHILADELPHIA.

[illegible]

AMERICAN HOUSE,

WEST MARKET STREET,

YORK, PA.

ELIAS EYSTER, PROPRIETOR.

[illegible]

HOFFMAN'S SALOON,

CARLISLE ST., GETTYSBURG, PA.

[illegible]

For Sale.

[illegible]

KEYSTONE HOUSE,

CHAMBERSBURG ST., GETTYSBURG, PA.

WM. E. WYKES, PROPRIETOR.

[illegible]

EAGLE HOTEL,

NEW OXFORD, ADAMS COUNTY, PA.

[illegible]

Baltimore Lock Hospital.

DR. JOHNSTON,

[illegible]

NEW OXFORD ADVERTISEMENTS.

[illegible]

The Gettysburg Compiler

IS PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING BY H. J. STAHLE.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum in advance; Two Dollars and Fifty Cents if not paid in advance. No subscription discontinued, unless at the option of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.

ADVERTISEMENTS inserted at the usual rates.

JOB PRINTING, of every description—from the smallest tale for card to the largest handbill or poster—done with dispatch, in a workmanlike manner, and at the lowest living prices.

Office on Baltiмore street, a few doors above the Court-House, on the opposite side, with "Printing Compiler Office" on the door.

Gettysburg Compiler.

H. J. STAHLE, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

GETTYSBURG, PA., FRIDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 17, 1871.

NUMBER 8. FIFTY-FORTH YEAR.

Attorneys, Physicians, &c.

JACOB A. STICHELLER,

ATTORNEY AT LAW.

[illegible]

JOHN M. KRAUTH,

ATTORNEY AT LAW, Gettysburg, Pa.

[illegible]

D. A. COVER, D.D.S.

[illegible]

H. L. DONCEY,

ATTORNEY AT LAW.

[illegible]

MARRIAGE.

[illegible]

REUBEN A. BUSHEY,

ATTORNEY AT LAW,

GETTYSBURG, PA.

[illegible]

ALEXANDER WILLS,

ATTORNEY AT LAW,

[illegible]

DAVID B. GEISLER,

ATTORNEY AT LAW,

[illegible]

J. C. NEELY,

[illegible]

DR. C. H. LEAS,

[illegible]

DR. R. ULRICH,

[illegible]

DR. J. L. BIKLE,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, MIDDLE [illegible]

DR. J. A. BERNDTSONN,

[illegible]

DR. H. LEFEVRE, M. D.,

[illegible]

WATCHES!! WATCHES!!

[illegible]

JOHN W. TRONE,

BARBER AND HAIR DRESSER,

[illegible]

DR. C. H. BUEHLER,

[illegible]

DR. E. E. BOLL,

[illegible]

DR. J. L. WILSON,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, MIDDLE [illegible]

DR. S. REDWINE,

[illegible]

DR. H. C. BIGHAM, M. D.,

[illegible]

YOUNG MEN

who have fallen victims to the vicious practice of self-abuse, which generally proves to an untimely grave, both of body and mind, are invited to consult the Medical Institute, who publish a work on the subject, which they will send free of charge, in a sealed envelope, to any address. The work should be read by every young man who is nervous, debilitated, or who feels the effects of early indiscretion, or any other disease requiring medical aid. It contains 125 pages, and is recommended by eminent physicians as the most valuable work on the subject ever published. Address, in confidence, THE MEDICAL INSTITUTE, No. 2 Tremont Row, Boston, Mass.

[illegible]

Miscellaneous.

BUCKWHEAT CAKES.

I love to see, in summer time,
The farmer plow the land,
And broadcast on the furrows saw
The buckwheat with his hand.

I love to see the little germ,
Come springing up to view,
And see at morn the growing plant
Bejeweled with sparkling dew.

I love to see the blossoms ope
As white as purely snow,
While o'er the fields the gentle winds
With balm perfume blow.

I love to see the blooming field
Put on its coat of brown,
And see the heavy-laden stalk
With opened grain hang down.

I love to see, in even swath,
The cradled buckwheat lie,
And help to rake and bind the sheaves,
And see them up to dry.

I love to see the loaded sheaves
Before the old barn-door,
And hear the sounding of the flail
Upon the thresching floor.

I love to see the funning-mill
Blow off the dusty chaff,
And see the measure up the grain
And "strike" the bushel half.

I love to see the water-wheel
Revolve with mighty power,
While hot-the miff-tone's whizzing round,
To grind the buckwheat flour.

I love to hear the threshing flail
Within the mellow mill,
And see the miller scoop the flour,
The farmer's bag to fill.

I love to see the busy cook
Her pancake shatter make,
And on the heated griddle pour
The limpid, flowing cake.

I love to see the half-done cake
With skill turned upside down,
Until the stove with ruddy heat
Has baked the pancake brown.

The buttered cake upon my plate
I clearly love to see,
And when with syrup sweetened well,
It looks most temptingly.

Than all the pleasures I have named
A greater one I take
'Tis at the table, when I sit
And eat the buckwheat cake.

WHO KILLED HIM?

BY C. D. CLARK.

The chief at the office received this telegram from Byrington, a village on the Erie road, on the morning of June 12, 18—:

SUPERINTENDENT K:

Murder at Byrington. Send on Crosby at once. TOMPSON.

The Crosby mentioned in the telegram was your humble servant, who had grown gray in the detective service, and knew something of the ins and outs of human nature. Tempson, the sheriff at Byrington, knew this well, for he was an old member of the force. So when the chief said: "Take the 6.30 train to Byrington," I took it without asking questions. We generally obeyed K, without superfluous talking.

A looker-on at the Erie depot would have seen a farmer-like personage, carrying a respectable-looking carpet bag—and, to all appearance, very much afraid of evil-doers, in the shape of pick-pockets—taking a ticket to Byrington. This sedate personage was Thomas Crosby of the secret service.

One or two well dressed sports on the train laughed at me, and before I had been an hour on the train, tried to pick my pockets. They did not succeed, and I managed to say a quiet word to one of them, and when we reached the next station they found it convenient to leave the train, and I went on to Byrington.

I found Tempson waiting on me at the office, and he was glad to see me, and introduced me to several of his friends as Mr. Thomas Crosby, from "over in Jersey."

I went up with him to look at the body. It lay in the darkened room, covered with a sheet. Tempson brought a light and threw off the sheet to the waist, and I saw the form and face of a young man, of powerful frame, with a handsome face, even in death. One of those cold, clear cut cameo like faces, some men have, with thin lips and white, even teeth. The type of the face was not unknown to me—a human tiger.

"What was his name?" I said.

"James Adkin," replied Tempson.

"His profession?"

"A lawyer—and a good one; the best we had in Town."

"Could you show me the place where he was killed?"

"Certainly."

We covered the body and left it, after I had noted that he had died by a stroke of a sharp, narrow bladed knife.

The place of the murder was an open field by the side of a running stream. Here, in many places, the grass had been beaten down by the tread of feet—for Adkin and fought for his life. I noted that footprints of the murdered man were made by the fashionable boot of the day, and the other tracks were more clumsy, and had been made by a heavy man.

The struggle had taken place close to the bank of the stream, and as I looked over into the water I saw something shining there, and baring my arm, plunged it into the water to the shoulder, and brought out a dangerous looking Spanish dirk knife, with about two inches broken from the point. There was blood upon the knife still, and upon the silver plate on the handle the initials R. A. D.

"Do you know this knife, Tempson?" I said, holding it up.

He started back with a horrified look.

"Roland Davidson's dirk, as I live. How came it here?"

"Umph! Who is Roland Davidson?"

"The partner of Adkins," he said.

"Were they good friends?"

"They were until a day or two ago, when I understood they had a quarrel. It was about a young lady—"

"Oh, hush, Jack; you know it generally is about a lady. Were they rivals?"

"You see young Davidson—a noble fellow, if there ever was one in this world—has been engaged to a young lady in this town. She lived in that white house yonder, and Adkins had been seeing her home when he was killed. It was about her they quarreled."

"Ah, you would not mind introducing me to that young lady?"

"What do you mean to ask her? She isn't going to tell anything to harm Roland."

"Don't, Jack, or you'll make me think you have forgotten what you learned in the force. Am I the man to let her know what I am after?"

He laughed at that, and led the way to the house on the hill, and introduced me to Miss Florence Whylie, and the moment I saw her I was satisfied that a man could get very jealous of another if he loved her. One of those rare women who win your heart at the first glance, and keep it in spite of you. A sunny, open hearted, innocent creature, with such a pair of eyes!

"I should like to ask you a few questions with regard to this unfortunate young man who was murdered. You saw him last on the night of the murder?"

"Yes."

"Did you meet any one coming up?"

"Yes; we met Roland Davidson just below the bridge, and he said something to Mr. Adkins, which I did not hear."

"Did you speak to him?"

"No; we had quarreled that afternoon and I was angry with him."

"Did you meet no one else?"

"A man passed us as we stood at the gate, who looked hard at Mr. Adkins, and seemed to hesitate, as if wishing to speak to him, but passed on."

"Could you see his face?"

"No; his hat was pulled low down over his eyes."

I took out the knife I had found in the creek, and showed it to her, and asked her if she knew it. Up to this time she had been very quiet and collected; but when she saw that knife, there came a swift change over her face, and she began to abuse me like a pick pocket. She called me a spy, and said I had come to swear away the life of an innocent man. Of course I let her rave on, and the end was that she let out one or two things I wanted to know, and then I came away.

"We must take this young man, Tempson," said I, as we left the house. "I don't say he has killed Adkins, mind, and I don't say he didn't; but there is good ground for an arrest."

"You've got to take him then," said Tempson, "for I won't."

"We must take him," I said. "But you show me the man, that's all."

"Come in the hotel."

We went in together, and had a glass of ale, and a cigar. We hadn't been there ten minutes when the door opened and a young fellow came in, whose face attracted me at once. It was the sad cast of face I like—manly and strong, with a well shaped head, and the eye of a king. His face was pale, and he walked to the bar and called for brandy, toss off two glasses in rapid succession, and went out hastily. He drank like a man who did it to drown care.

I felt Tempson's fed upon mine, and knew that was my name and we paid for what we had and went out. I could hardly think the youngster guilty of murder, but my duty was plain, and that night he slept in the county jail. He made no resistance, and I heard him mutter something to himself as he was led away.

After he was locked up, I heard something more of him. He had come home late on the night of the murder, with his clothing torn and stained, and a look of agony in his face. Taking everything together, and the fact that he was of an equitable temper, the case looked dark for him.

He was examined, and the result was that he was fully committed, without bail, to stand his trial for willful murder.

I saw Florence Whylie in court, with a pale, frightened face, and when it was over she made straight for me. I knew what was coming, and tried to get away, but could not.

"I hope you are satisfied!" she said. "He is innocent—as innocent as I am, but he will be condemned, and you will be the cause. You are a wicked man!"

"You are angry now," I managed to say. "You shall see whether I am your enemy or not."

As I went out with him to look at the body. It lay in the darkened room, covered with a sheet. Tempson brought a light and threw off the sheet to the waist, and I saw the form and face of a young man, of powerful frame, with a handsome face, even in death. One of those cold, clear cut cameo like faces, some men have, with thin lips and white, even teeth. The type of the face was not unknown to me—a human tiger.

"What was his name?" I said.

"James Adkin," replied Tempson.

"His profession?"

"A lawyer—and a good one; the best we had in Town."

"Could you show me the place where he was killed?"

"Certainly."

We covered the body and left it, after I had noted that he had died by a stroke of a sharp, narrow bladed knife.

The place of the murder was an open field by the side of a running stream. Here, in many places, the grass had been beaten down by the tread of feet—for Adkin and fought for his life. I noted that footprints of the murdered man were made by the fashionable boot of the day, and the other tracks were more clumsy, and had been made by a heavy man.

The struggle had taken place close to the bank of the stream, and as I looked over into the water I saw something shining there, and baring my arm, plunged it into the water to the shoulder, and brought out a dangerous looking Spanish dirk knife, with about two inches broken from the point. There was blood upon the knife still, and upon the silver plate on the handle the initials R. A. D.

"Do you know this knife, Tempson?" I said, holding it up.

He started back with a horrified look.

"Roland Davidson's dirk, as I live. How came it here?"

"Umph! Who is Roland Davidson?"

"The partner of Adkins," he said.

"Were they good friends?"

"They were until a day or two ago, when I understood they had a quarrel. It was about a young lady—"

"Oh, hush, Jack; you know it generally is about a lady. Were they rivals?"

"You see young Davidson—a noble fellow, if there ever was one in this world—has been engaged to a young lady in this town. She lived in that white house yonder, and Adkins had been seeing her home when he was killed. It was about her they quarreled."

"Ah, you would not mind introducing me to that young lady?"

"What do you mean to ask her? She isn't going to tell anything to harm Roland."

"Don't, Jack, or you'll make me think you have forgotten what you learned in the force. Am I the man to let her know what I am after?"

He laughed at that, and led the way to the house on the hill, and introduced me to Miss Florence Whylie, and the moment I saw her I was satisfied that a man could get very jealous of another if he loved her. One of those rare women who win your heart at the first glance, and keep it in spite of you. A sunny, open hearted, innocent creature, with such a pair of eyes!

"I should like to ask you a few questions with regard to this unfortunate young man who was murdered. You saw him last on the night of the murder?"

"Yes."

"Did you meet any one coming up?"

"Yes; we met Roland Davidson just below the bridge, and he said something to Mr. Adkins, which I did not hear."

"Did you speak to him?"

"No; we had quarreled that afternoon and I was angry with him."

"Did you meet no one else?"

"A man passed us as we stood at the gate, who looked hard at Mr. Adkins, and seemed to hesitate, as if wishing to speak to him, but passed on."

"Could you see his face?"

"No; his hat was pulled low down over his eyes."

I took out the knife I had found in the creek, and showed it to her, and asked her if she knew it. Up to this time she had been very quiet and collected; but when she saw that knife, there came a swift change over her face, and she began to abuse me like a pick pocket. She called me a spy, and said I had come to swear away the life of an innocent man. Of course I let her rave on, and the end was that she let out one or two things I wanted to know, and then I came away.

"We must take this young man, Tempson," said I, as we left the house. "I don't say he has killed Adkins, mind, and I don't say he didn't; but there is good ground for an arrest."

"You've got to take him then," said Tempson, "for I won't."

"We must take him," I said. "But you show me the man, that's all."

"Come in the hotel."

We went in together, and had a glass of ale, and a cigar. We hadn't been there ten minutes when the door opened and a young fellow came in, whose face attracted me at once. It was the sad cast of face I like—manly and strong, with a well shaped head, and the eye of a king. His face was pale, and he walked out to the bar and called for brandy, toss off two glasses in rapid succession, and went out hastily. He drank like a man who did it to drown care.

I felt Tempson's fed upon mine, and knew that was my name and we paid for what we had and went out. I could hardly think the youngster guilty of murder, but my duty was plain, and that night he slept in the county jail. He made no resistance, and I heard him mutter something to himself as he was led away.

After he was locked up, I heard something more of him. He had come home late on the night of the murder, with his clothing torn and stained, and a look of agony in his face. Taking everything together, and the fact that he was of an equitable temper, the case looked dark for him.

He was examined, and the result was that he was fully committed, without bail, to stand his trial for willful murder.

I saw Florence Whylie in court, with a pale, frightened face, and when it was over she made straight for me. I knew what was coming, and tried to get away, but could not.

"I hope you are satisfied!" she said. "He is innocent—as innocent as I am, but he will be condemned, and you will be the cause. You are a wicked man!"

"You are angry now," I managed to say. "You shall see whether I am your enemy or not."

As I went out with him to look at the body. It lay in the darkened room, covered with a sheet. Tempson brought a light and threw off the sheet to the waist, and I saw the form and face of a young man, of powerful frame, with a handsome face, even in death. One of those cold, clear cut cameo like faces, some men have, with thin lips and white, even teeth. The type of the face was not unknown to me—a human tiger.

"What was his name?" I said.

"James Adkin," replied Tempson.

"His profession?"

"A lawyer—and a good one; the best we had in Town."

"Could you show me the place where he was killed?"

"Certainly."

We covered the body and left it, after I had noted that he had died by a stroke of a sharp, narrow bladed knife.

The place of the murder was an open field by the side of a running stream. Here, in many places, the grass had been beaten down by the tread of feet—for Adkin and fought for his

Gettysburg Compiler.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 17 1871

The Democratic majority in the Legislature of Virginia has been increased largely.

It is denied that the Popes have requested of President Thiers the privilege of an asylum in France.

The Republican majority in the State of New York is about 50,000. The figures will be reversed in 1872.

The Senate of Georgia has passed a resolution denying the existence of a Ku Klux organization in that State.

HON. THOMAS M. NEWTON, Democrat, has been elected to the United States Senate by the Legislature of Georgia.

A most destructive fire was raging in the city of Concordia on Monday. The Pine Bluff and Shreveport become a mass of ruins.

The sale of $50,000,000 in bonds by the Radical officials of South Carolina is causing much excitement in New York money circles.

JAMES N. KEENS has been appointed Marshal of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in place of I. M. Gregory deceased. The selection pleases Indy but Keens.

ONE of the late Radical defaulters is an Colored Bullock, distinguishing of the Freedmen's Bureau. Ten years ago he was a poor man and is now worth $150,000.

THE New York Herald finds it difficult to tell whether it is that we will hail with decent composure the month piece of Sir James Stansfield who strikes back from the dome of the grave.

THE Cincinnati Enquirer of New York is discouraged in encouraging and thinks that if nothing disturbs the peace of the country the Democratic party will do well and most happily or hopefully.

RESULTS IN WEST VIRGINIA.—The Conservatives have elected 66 members of the convention, and the Republicans 1. In the Senate the Conservatives have elected 12 the Republicans 1 that holding over. In the House the Conservatives have elected 1 and the Republican 1.

DEATHS.—Rev. Alfred Cookman a distinguished Methodist divine died at Newark New Jersey on Saturday morning.

Hon. George Taylor President Judge of the Twenty fifth Judicial District of Huntingdon Juniata and Mifflin counties died yesterday.

THE Philadelphia Ledger Republican organ of Mr. Cameron says the Court was set the last of the Court House and Patterson sworn fully to contract the calls for Grant's portrait.

It comes so whole out of a story we begin to wonder if Republicans are ever ashamed of their conduct. Republicans should be the last to cast the first stone.

THE Legislature of Georgia has passed a resolution denying the existence of a Ku Klux organization in that State.

HON. THOMAS M. NEWTON Democrat has been elected to the United States Senate by the Legislature of Georgia.

A most destructive fire was raging in the city of Concordia on Monday. The Pine Bluff and Shreveport become a mass of ruins.

The sale of $50,000,000 in bonds by the Radical officials of South Carolina is causing much excitement in New York money circles.

JAMES N. KEENS has been appointed Marshal of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in place of I. M. Gregory deceased. The selection pleases Indy but Keens.

ONE of the late Radical defaulters is an Colored Bullock, distinguishing of the Freedmen's Bureau. Ten years ago he was a poor man and is now worth $150,000.

THE New York Herald finds it difficult to tell whether it is that we will hail with decent composure the month piece of Sir James Stansfield who strikes back from the dome of the grave.

THE Cincinnati Enquirer of New York is discouraged in encouraging and thinks that if nothing disturbs the peace of the country the Democratic party will do well and most happily or hopefully.

RESULTS IN WEST VIRGINIA.—The Conservatives have elected 66 members of the convention, and the Republicans 1. In the Senate the Conservatives have elected 12 the Republicans 1 that holding over. In the House the Conservatives have elected 1 and the Republican 1.

DEATHS.—Rev. Alfred Cookman a distinguish of

SPECIAL NOTICES

CURE AND CURE OF CONSUMPTION

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES

PROOF MARK BAILEY,

PUBLIC SALE

PUBLIC SALE OF Real and Personal Property

SHERIFF'S SALE.

FARMER WANTED

COURT PROCLAMATION.

Best Oysters.

THE GENUINE BAKER PLOUGH!

CONFECTIONERY

A BEAUTIFUL HOME

Store Stand

MILLINERY

FANCY STORE.

A HANDSOME HOME

SMALL FARM AND CHESTNUT TIMBER

REAL ESTATE

Administrator's Notice.

Administrator's Notice.

NOTICE.

Administrator's Notice.

BANK DIVIDEND.

BANK DIVIDEND

Gettysburg Compiler.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

PUBLIC SALE

A DESIRABLE FARM

VALUABLE FARM

A HANDSOME TRACT OF LAND

VALUABLE BUSINESS HOUSE

A HANDSOME HOME

TOWN PROPERTY

The Nation,

Administrator's Notice.

VALUABLE PROPERTY

SHERIFF'S SALES.

MONFORT & KRISE,

DEALERS IN Flour, Grain, Groceries &c, GETTYSBURG, PA

Fall and Winter CLOTHING. LATEST STYLES AT CUNNINGHAM'S

MERCHANT TAILORING

Another Fresh Arrival OF THE BEST READY-MADE CLOTHING

RUN ON US!

PICKING & CO'S The Largest Clothing and Hat House in the County

Register's Notices.

THE ALDINE:

NORRIS' HEADQUARTERS!

On Southwest Corner of Centre Square, GETTYSBURG, PA.

Has the largest and Best Stock of Fall and Winter Clothing

FOR THE BEST MANUFACTURED BOOTS & SHOES, with a variety of WINTER UNDER-CLOTHING, AND GENTS FURNISHING GOODS OF EVERY VARIETY, also a large assortment of NOTIONS, TRUNKS, and everything usual in a Gentleman's Furnishing Store.

GIVE US A CALL.

NEW FALL & WINTER GOODS!

GRIEST & BOWERS.

New Fall and Winter Goods

The 1st National Bank of Gettysburg,

The Northern Pacific 1st Mortgage 7 3-10 Railroad Gold Bonds, Principal and Interest payable in Gold.

THE ALDINE:

New Advertisements.

"WIDE AWAKE"

EVERY FARMER

American Farm Journal,

PATENTS

Luff's Coffee

THE CONGRESS ARCTIC.

A CARD.

The American Washer! PRICE, $5.50

The American Washer Saves Money, Time and Drudgery

$85.50.

SOLID SILVER WARE!

WEDDING PRESENTS.

NEW GOODS!

Bargains! Bargains!

E. SHEELY & BRO.,

DRY GOODS, GROCERIES, GLASSWARE, HARDWARE, CARPETS, OIL CLOTHS, HATS, CAPS, BOOTS AND SHOES

Fall and Winter Importation 1871. RIBBONS, Millinery and Straw Goods.

ARMSTRONG, GATOR & CO.,

JEWELERS, SILVERSMITHS, AND IMPORTERS,

FALL & HOLIDAY GOODS,

PARIS BRONZES!

CLOCKS IN AND MANTLE ORNAMENTS

FINE FANCY GOODS!

PARIAN STATUARY!

SOLID SILVER WARE!

WEDDING PRESENTS.

NEW GOODS!

Bargains! Bargains!

E. SHEELY & BRO.,

DRY GOODS, GROCERIES, GLASSWARE, HARDWARE, CARPETS, OIL CLOTHS, HATS, CAPS, BOOTS AND SHOES

Fall and Winter Importation 1871. RIBBONS, Millinery and Straw Goods.

ARMSTRONG, GATOR & CO.,

JEWELERS, SILVERSMITHS, AND IMPORTERS,

FALL & HOLIDAY GOODS,

PARIS BRONZES!

CLOCKS IN AND MANTLE ORNAMENTS

FINE FANCY GOODS!

PARIAN STATUARY!

NEW GOODS AGAIN

REBERT & BUSHMAN'S.

Fall and Winter Styles!

CUSTOM WORK

Give us a Call

CLOCKS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY.

BOOTS AND SHOES

J. L. SCHICK

HAS RECEIVED THE LATEST STYLES OF FALL AND WINTER DRY GOODS!

ALSO A GREAT VARIETY OF Notions, Perfumery, &c. ALL OF WHICH WILL BE SOLD AT THE LOWEST PRICES!

HUBER'S, BALTIMORE STREET.

DRUGS and MEDICINES, SCHOOL BOOKS, BLANK BOOKS, Hymn Books, &c., STATIONERY, PERFUMERY AND SOAPS, BRUSHES, COMBS, &C. FORNEY'S Horse and Cattle Powder, WARRANTED.

NOTICE

Investors and Holders of U. S. '62 5-20 Bonds.

Northern Pacific Railroad Gold 7 3-10 Bonds.

STATE-PRISON LIFE;

FREE TO BOOK AGENTS!

COLGATE'S EAU-DE-COLOGNE TOILET SOAP.

OYSTER SALOON AND CONFECTIONERY.

JOHN GRUEL, CHAMBERSBURG ST., GETTYSBURG.

Prime Oysters

Floral Guide for 1872.

For Sale.

WOMAN, KNOW THYSELF

$1,000 00

"THE GUIDE BOARD."

GREAT SAVING TO CONSUMERS

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.

STATE-PRISON LIFE;

JURUBEBA.

JURUBEBA

JURUBEBA

8 O'CLOCK.

WHEAT WANTED.

BROOMS! BROOMS!

Gettysburg Compiler.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1871.

THE FARM AND HOUSE

FALL PLANTING OF FRUIT TREES

The best time to plant fruit trees whether in the fall or spring has long been a mooted question among fruit growers of the Northern and Northwestern States. In localities where the mercury falls seldom or nothing below zero during the winter months and strong harsh winds are common through the month of March the question is one of importance.

When trees are carelessly lifted from the nursery row, jolted out of place by rough usage, packing off and leaving two thirds of the young rootlets in the ground, such trees will grow but poorly in all the first year, but will start a much better chance if planted in the spring. Again fall set trees such as cherries and vigorous young growth in the autumn now I prefer to transplant in the spring for fear lest the sap in the swaying of the top of the trees of a windy day should loosen the young rootlets before they have had time to take hold of the soil. Well matured trees with ripened wood and buds will do well if set in the fall, but I prefer to wait until the sap is stirring in the trees in the spring. When trees of this character are planted in the spring the soil should be put in good tilth and fully pulverized, manure should be spread upon the top of the ground back the root will very soon start and all the conditions will be more favorable for a rapid growth than if the same kind of trees were planted in the fall even under the most favorable circumstances. Put with the low stocky trees that are well furnished with branches and carefully lifted from the nursery row fall plant of such I will prepare ground and will answer very well and often better than spring planting. More than one fall of open ground was planted in the fall and at present no one could tell from an orchard planted in the fall which were planted in the spring or fall. I frequently and do now advocate fall planting of pear trees and such apple trees because I know from years of experience how important it is in setting out a single tree or an orchard that it should be in a condition to grow the top of the tree with the growth of the roots. Every book published tend to hold the cut off in check, getting the tree in a permanent and some of the long fibrous roots cut off within twelve or fifteen days after the tree will add

[illegible]

To Dyspeptics

To Sufferers from Liver Complaint.

To those having no Appetite,

To those with black and dry constitutions

To Nervous People

To Children Wasting Away

To any who think but a dying state of mind

Or suffering with any of the following Symptoms, which indicate Dyspepsia or a Sick Stomach

[illegible]

HOOFLANDS GERMAN BITTERS,

[illegible]

HOOFLANDS' GERMAN TONIC,

[illegible]

PODOPHYLLIN PILL

[illegible]

THE WEEKLY SUN, PUBLISHED IN PENNSYLVANIA

[illegible]

Who would take for cancer, Dyspepsia and Stomach Bitters?

[illegible]

Hardware and Groceries.

GEORGE SWEITZER

[illegible]

HARDWARE,

[illegible]

GROCERIES

[illegible]

WATCHES & JEWELRY.

WM. E. McCLENEY

[illegible]

CIGAR STORE

IN THE DIAMOND

[illegible]

CARRIAGE-MAKING

[illegible]

WILLIAM CHRITZMAN,

[illegible]

Carpenter & Contractor.

[illegible]

Hardware & Groceries.

[illegible]

HARDWARE GROCERIES

[illegible]

SEGARS SMOKING & CHEWING TOBACCOS, ETC.

[illegible]

THE BEST BRANDS

[illegible]

CARRIAGE-MAKING

[illegible]

WILLIAM CHRITZMAN,

[illegible]

Carpenter & Contractor.

[illegible]

Hardware and Groceries.

GEORGE SWEITZER

[illegible]

HARDWARE,

[illegible]

GROCERIES

[illegible]

WATCHES & JEWELRY.

WM. E. McCLENEY

[illegible]

CIGAR STORE

IN THE DIAMOND

[illegible]

CARRIAGE-MAKING

[illegible]

WILLIAM CHRITZMAN,

[illegible]

Carpenter & Contractor.

[illegible]

Hardware & Groceries.

[illegible]

HARDWARE GROCERIES

[illegible]

SEGARS SMOKING & CHEWING TOBACCOS, ETC.

[illegible]

THE BEST BRANDS